PROEM.

The book used for recording the general affairs of the town of Rowley from 1639 to 1672 is much worn, mutilated, and nearly illegible, many leaves are missing, so that nothing remains of record before August, 1647. The printed copy begins on page 51.

Another book, containing the record of the laying out of lands and division of fences, was begun in 1643. It appears herein on the first fifty pages and thence chronologically in connection with the first named record.

There is a third book, styled "Book No. 1" of the town records, into which some matters from the first book have been imperfectly copied. Records therein, not found in the other two books, appear herein in proper order.

A list of those who had house lots in the first division is here given with a brief account of each :

In 1640 Mr. Thomas Nelson had erected a saw-mill where Glen Mills now are, and soon after, certainly as early as 1643, he added a grist-mill.

John Pearson came about this time with quite a company, and erected, near Mr. Nelson's grist-mill, a fulling-mill, the first in this country.

Many of the first settlers were weavers. Johnson, in his “Wonder-Working Providence” (London, 1654) says of the Rowley people :

“These people being industrious every way, soon built many houses, to the number of about three-score families, and were the first that set upon making Cloth in this Western World; for which end they built a fulling mill, and caused their little-ones to be very diligent in spinning cotton-wool. many of them having been clothiers in England.”

Gov. Winthrop, under date of 12th of Fourth month, 1643, says:

“Our supplies from England failing much men began to look about them, and fell to a manufacture of cotton; whereof, we had a store from Barbadoes, and of hemp and flax; wherein Rowley, to their great commendation, exceeded all other towns.”

In Great Britain from the 14th century till 1752, the legal and ecclesiastical year began at March 25 (Annunciation Day), though it was not uncommon to reckon it from January 1.

The change from the reckoning of Julius Cæsar to that of Pope Gregory XIII was made by act of the British parliament in September, 1752, the 3^d of the month being called the 14th, and from that time the legal year began January 1.

The former reckoning is called "old style" and the latter "new style."

Hence the double dating. Thus the revolution of 1688 occurred in February of that legal year, or, as we should now say, in February, 1689; and the date will often be found written Feb., 1688-9.

In this Volume of Records the original has been carefully followed in words, in letters, in punctuation, and in blank spaces, so that the reader has all the advantages that can be gained from the original, save in handwriting alone.

These marks + + + indicate words illegible.

If errors are found they may aid in recalling the words of Marcus Antoninus:

"Our understandings are always liable to error; nature and certainty are very hard to come at, and infallibility is mere vanity and pretence."
